JP Morgan Commodities Analysts Reveal the Reality to their Rich Clients: $500 per Barrel of Oil

HAL TURNER | NATION | MAY 05, 2026 | HITS: 13099

This Content is for Subscribers Only, so THEY can prepare for what's coming --

As most readers know, JP Morgan/CHASE is the largest Bank in the entire United States. 'Too big to fail."

In matters financial, they do not "f-around;" they deal in reality.

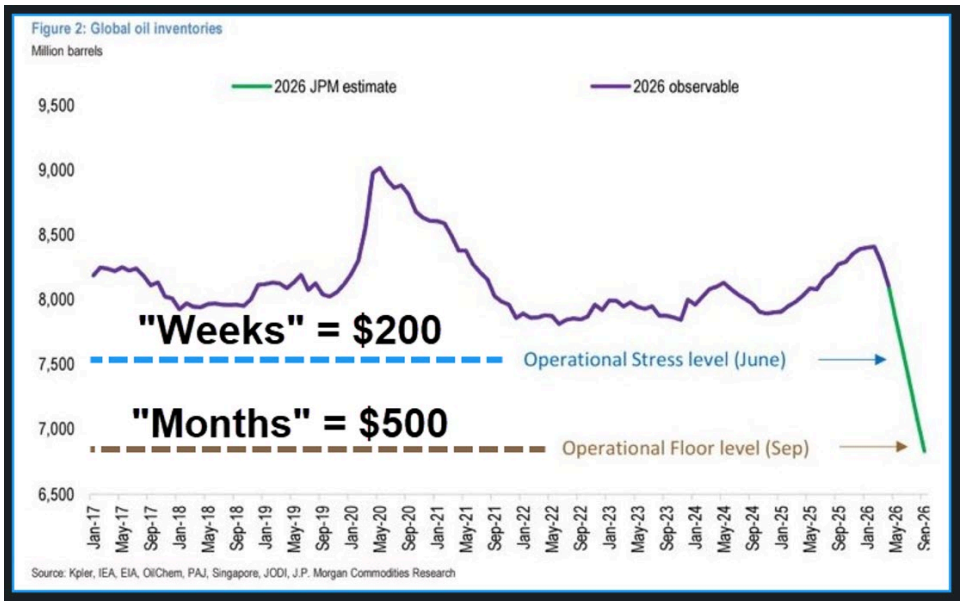
JP Morgan/CHASE revealed that reality to their richest clients earlier this week so their clients can prepare for what JP Morgan/CHASE sees coming. Thanks to a listener to my radio show, I am able to pass this along.

Below, JP Morgan Commodities revealed the actual oil reserve situation worldwide, how those Reserves are being drawn down and over what period of time. They also reveal how the pricing of oil will change as the drawdown continues, until the price of oil reaches "operational floor."

The "operational floor" means the absolute bottom of storage reserves for oil flow to be able to continue.

Here is the chart:

EN



According to the chart, by THIS JUNE, oil is expected to be priced at two-hundred dollars ($200) per barrel.

By September, as the drawdown of oil reserves continues worldwide, oil is expected to reach the "operational floor" triggering a price of $500 per barrel. Again, that is by-- or in -- September. This coming September. Five (5) months from now.

You with me so far? Good.

Let's do some basic math.

As of 1:02 PM Eastern Daylight Time (EDT) Commodities futures show the price of Oil as follows:

So for ease of computation, let's say oil is now $100 a barrel. I know it shows higher, but lets use $100 for this basic math.

Here in northeastern New Jersey, just outside midtown Manhattan, New York City, gasoline at the EXXON station, located at 31st Street and Kennedy Boulevard in Union City, NJ costs the following:

EN

I asked Google AI "how much does a gallon of gasoline increase in price for every ten dollar increase in price of a Barrel of Oil?"

Google AI responded:

AI Overview

A $10 increase in the price of a barrel of oil typically leads to an increase of approximately 20 to 30 cents per gallon for gasoline. Because a barrel holds 42 gallons, this roughly correlates to about 2.4 cents per gallon for every $1 rise in oil, though market factors can shift this average.

Key details:

Typical Impact: A $10 rise in crude oil (e.g., WTI) translates to a 24–25 cent increase at the pump.

Range: Depending on market volatility, the jump is often ited between 20–35 cents per gallon.

EN

Timing: Gasoline prices often adjust to these increases within 1–3 weeks.

The cost of crude oil generally makes up roughly 50% to 55% of the total price of a gallon of gasoline.

Now let's go with the basic math:

Regular Unleaded here in New Jersey today costs $4.569 per gallon.

So if the price of a barrel of Oil goes to $200, that same gasoline will cost an additional $2.50 per gallon or a sales price of $7.069 per gallon.

If oil goes to $300 per barrel, that same gallon of gasoline will rise another $2.50 per gallon to $9.56 per gallon.

If oil goes to $400 per Barrel, that same gallon of gasoline rises another $2.50 to $12.06 per gallon

And if/when oil rises to the JP Morgan/CHASE estimate above to $500 per barrel, that same gallon of gasoline rises another $2.50 to $14.56 per gallon. By this September.

My KIA model "K5" car has a 16 gallon gas tank. At $14.56 per gallon, it will cost me $233.10 to fill it up from empty.

I can't afford that. Can you?

Lets talk about Diesel fuel, because the entire trucking Industry runs on Diesel fuel. As shown on the EXXON sign above, today in northeastern New Jersey, Diesel fuel is selling for $5.75 per gallon.

Google AI reports that for every $10 increase in price for a barrel of oil, Diesel fuel rises about 29 cents per gallon. So when a barrel of crude oil goes to $200, one gallon of diesel fuel goes up $2.90 per gallon at the pump.

$5.75 today's price plus $2.90 increase for $200 barrel of oil brings Diesel to $8.65 a gallon.

t $300 per barrel of Oil, diesel rises another $2.90 per allon to $11.55 a gallon

EN

At $400 per barrel of oil, diesel rises another $2.90 per gallon to $14.45 a gallon

And if/when oil rises to the JP Morgan/CHASE estimate above to $500 per barrel, that same gallon of Diesel fuel rises another $2.90 to $17.35 per gallon. By this September.

Trucks get 5 to 12 MPG, depending upon the size of the truck and the weight of its cargo. Trucks usually have a minimum 50 gallon fuel tank. To fill that 50 gallon fuel tank, will cost the trucker $867.50. To go about 500 miles.

The big over-the-road tractor trailers have 100 gallon tanks. Many even have two, 100 gallon tanks. To fill 200 gallons of diesel fuel will cost THREE-THOUSAND FOUR-HUNDRED-SEVENTY DOLLARS ($3,470) IN FUEL . . . . To go abut 2,000 miles (not even fully coast-to-coast.)

The product hauled by that truck, has to pay for that $3470 in diesel fuel cost. Since EVERYTHING, except electricity and natural gas, has to move by truck, literally everything manufactured or just sold here in the USA, will skyrocket in price.

That means the price of every product hauled by those trucks, must pay for the cost of that fuel. So the price of everything . . . . . will skyrocket due to diesel fuel price increases.

The US economy simply cannot handle these types of prices. The economy will be FORCED to shut down. All of it.

No more commerce.

No more food deliveries to stores. No more trucks out doing package deliveries. Everything simply stops.

Why do you think Shares of United Parcel Service (UPS) dropped by 10.5% yesterday?

Why do you think shares in FedEx dropped by 9.1% yesterday?

EN

The rich folks KNOW the truckers won't be able to survive, so the rich are quietly DUMPING stocks. They're getting out.

When this unavoidable series of price increases happens, ask yourself:

How are you going to EAT? How will your family EAT?

Work? What work? What companies will be able to SELL anything with prices so high from fuel costs? If they can't sell anything, how long do you think they can remain "in business?" What does that mean for YOUR job? Yea. You have none.

If the company is still even open, how will you get there?

It all falls apart.

And I think THAT is the message that JP Morgan/CHASE very quietly conveyed to their rich muckity-muck clients with the release of the release of the chart above.

Maybe I'm wrong. Maybe JP Morgan CHASE is wrong.

Pray we are.

We're not.

Given all the Barbaric third-world savages Biden and Company let into the country, the "end" ought to be quite eventful - as roving bands of third world savages pillage and loot for food, or to steal to get money for food.

Why do you think all the Uber-Rich have been building underground bunkers for the past few years????
Duuuuuuhhhhhhh.

The only saving grace is that it will get worst in the cities, first. The cities, where they're all Democrats. I think they'll be slaughtering each other for food.

I suspect the world may see an absolute blood-bath.

Oh, don't fret. It's their just desert for betraying our country in favor of illegal immigration. They'll probably be slaughtered by the very savages they brought into the country. Poetic justice if you think about it.

You do not have much time to prepare as best you can. Get to it.

The one thing our government will NEVER allow is for them to lose control.

Look for:

1 Price controls
2 Rationing
3 Martial Law
4 Government handouts/allotments
5 Conscripted work crews
6 Ownership of personal property outlawed
7 Severe travel restrictions
8 War

Thanks Hal for the information. What do families that are leasing and renting? What happens in that scenario if you can't work and everything is shut down?? How about your payments on your trucks and your cars?? I hope you can cover some of that maybe tonight, what we could expect.
Is the government going to step in and help its people?? I often think what country am I living in, it certainly isn't the one I served in the Marine Corp decades ago.

Respectfully, Hal. $200/barrel would shut down our economy. Things would explode long before $500/barrel.

If gas keeps climbing companies may shutdown. If companies shutdown people don't work to earn money. Everyone is talking about gas for their cars and trucks. I'd people are not earning money how do they pay their mortgages. I have mention this before. Millions of people are going to lose their homes.

Secondly, with gas climbing in price police and fire vehicles will not be moving and if so, it'll be something very serious. Ok. Increase my taxes, but without jobs no money no taxes no house.

Again, what is the answer, to this upcoming mayhem. There is no way one can prep enough for this movie about to be played out.why? Because we as Americans never struggled with nothing and no ebt cards don't count. We've never been displaces and surviving under those conditions. Yeah, we have retired military folks who trained through these scenarios, but the calvary isn't coming to sav you this time. Folks, if this is true then good luck and God speed.

Comments are back? Hokay.

"How will your family EAT?"

They won't eat. Many of us, likely the majority, will starve.

The whole point of all this is to kill off 7.5 billion people, per the Georgia Stones, leaving around 500 million people. One antichrist, comin' up!

The person who replaces Trump will be pure evil.

Ship of fools on a cruel sea
Ship of fools, sail away from me
The bottles stand as empty
As they were filled before
Time there was and plenty
But from that cup no more
Though I could not caution all, I still might warn a few
Don't lend your hand to raise no flag atop no ship of fools
Ship of fools on a cruel sea
Ship of fools, sail away from me
It was later than I thought when I first believed you
Now I cannot share your laughter, ship of fools.... GD

Quoting sandkellis:

> You mentioned that a barrel of oil holds 42 gallons. When did that change? Forever a barrel of oil held 55 gallons. 🤔 Shrinkage and price increase.

42 gallons has been the petroleum industry standard since the 1860s.

55 gallons is a later industrial container for storage and shipping, not the standard for measuring crude.

Im from Brazil. My MB W211 has a 80lt tank (21 gallons)
To fill the tank I pay 500BRL
Thats 1/3 of a minimum wage

for a fraction of that abuse rulers burned alive throughout History
But you know why nowadays they dont?

Because they brainwashed us that we live in a "Democracy" and that is the price to pay and that is the only one choice we have. Otherwise you would be a terrorist or tyrants apologetic

Under Kadafi's Lybia, housing was free. People paid cents to fill the car. Gov paid 5k a month for college studants abroad. And The West eliminated him like he was Adolf Hitler

The Republic of Portugal hired the largest consultant firm in the world to fix her balance. Their conclusion: Portugal cant to afford such a enormous Gov. The only way out would be returning to Monarchy or Dictatorship they said

That is the most dangerous Tyranny of all, because its masqueraded as Liberty, and very few can see thru what it is

Under any Tyranny in History at leats people knew the reality and who the Tyrant was Pressing the King for reforms was the obvious work for better days

Now people dont even know what to do or where to go

While I do appreciate the advise I figure I already have more than enough food to stay comfortable while my neighbors get desperate, at which point I expect them to turn on me like a pack of rabid jackals.

Not really worried though. I can handle a few, and if there's too many, well maybe I finally get to see my mother again this year.

In the Atlas Shrugged book & movie (Amazon or Netflix) the main character is filling up her company truck, somewhere in Colorado or Wyoming. Gas was $37.50 per gallon. To fill up here Chevy truck was over 800 buckaroos..... We are on this path. Listen to Hal about prepping up.
